Victory Bond Conversion Helps Business Recovery

Prime Minister's Statement Receives National Approval

Ottawa, Oct. 1.—The Prime Minister's frank concise statement regarding the 1934 Refunding Loan has met with warm and encouraging response from bankers, insurance and trust company executives, business men, professional men, agriculturists and labor leaders throughout the country. The concrete evidence of business recovery from the low point of last year which Mr. Bennett stressed in his opening announcement such as a 56% increase in industrial production, 17% increase in employment, 43% increase in farm products prices, as well as a substantial improvement in carloadings, electric power production and wholesale prices, emphasizes the strengthening of the national credit, the progress in achievement of national economy and the steady general up-trend in business.

Completion of this year's refunding program will bring the total war loan refinancing (inaugurated in 1931) to over $1,000,000,000.

$9,000,000 per annum has already been saved in interest charges and when this year's operations are concluded, the annual saving in interest will be about $14,000,000. This saving more than offsets interest charges on debt incurred to meet the extraordinary burdens incident to unemployment relief; and eventually should enable the government to reduce taxes.

The tenor of the comments from bankers, insurance and trust company executives, industrialists, agriculturists and labor leaders is ably summed up by the unanimity of their opinions, which are that Canada has emerged from the depression with probably less strain than that experienced in many other countries; and that, while our progress is gradual, it is well founded. There have been no disturbing recessions consequent upon too rapid a rise.

The consensus of opinion is that by reason of the favorable basis of conversion and the attractive yield offered (particularly in the long term bonds) the majority of 1919 Victory Bond holders will convert, and new investors hasten to secure an allotment of the new Bonds.

Some 85 school fairs were held in the province this year, according to a report just compiled.

The "trip around the world" sponsored by the United Ladies' Aid, was well patronized, proceeds amounting to over $60.00. A play in the evening in connection with it was excellent. A play called, "Money Makes a Difference," directed by Miss Marion Le Bow, who also played in one of the leads with Lawrence Munner playing opposite, was very well done indeed and was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

Mrs. Len Oldfield delighted the Audience with several dramatic numbers. Ruth Norcott gave several popular selections on Violin accompanied by L. Larsen, Gipsy Roudo, piano solo by Eileen Brinker and a piano duet by Ethel and Reatha Hanna of Lomond were well appreciated. Joan Williams was heard in a recitation entitled "At the Photographers." Mrs. Oaler of Queenstown sang a very pleasing solo and Posie Helevang sang "Rock-a-bye Moon," bringing to a close a very enjoyable evening.

A shower in honor of Miss Ruth Ferngrin was held at the home of Mrs. Jackson on Wed. afternoon.

After the reading and adoption of the minutes of the previous meeting, plans for future activities were discussed. The Sewing Committee reported favorable progress with their work, and requested that donations for the Bazaar be left with Mrs. Mackie.

Mrs. Bishop, convener of the Sunshine Committee, told of her plans for the fall and received words of appreciation for the splendid work she is doing. After adjournment the ladies were favored with a solo by Marjorie Leonard, a recitation by Betty Rhoad Jones, and a duet by Shirley Taylor and Lila Service. Even Rheumatic Pains Eased Fast Now!

BAD HEADACHES, NEURITIS PAINS OFTEN
RELIEVED IN MINUTES THIS WAY

Remember the pictures below when you want just relief from pain. Demand and get the method doctors prescribe—Aspirin. Millions have found that Aspirin eases even a bad headache, neuritis or rheumatic pain often in a few minutes.

In the stomach as in the glass here, an Aspirin tablet starts to dissolve, or disintegrate, almost the instant it touches moisture. It begins "taking hold" of your pain practically as soon as you swallow it. It is so important, Aspirin is safe. For scientific tests show this: Aspirin does not burn the heart. Remember these two points: Aspirin Speed and Aspirin Safety. And, see that you get ASPIRIN. It is made in Canada, and all druggists have it. Look for the name Bayer in the form of a cross on every Aspirin tablet.

Get into 12 tablets or economical bottle of 24 or 100 at any druggist's.

SYNOPSIS

"You've fallen here to a half-share in plenty of trouble," the lawyer told Gerald Keene. "The Broken Spur has been systematically looting the ranch, and old Joe Carr, your partner, is drinking himself into ruin."
(Now Go On With The Story)

"What seems to be the trouble?" Keene's tone was anxious.
"Exactly what I asked old Ben. He said that as far as he can see there are two reasons; Carr is mighty old fashioned. . . and the Broken Spur is next to 'em."

"Well, what of it? These days one's one's got to be next door." "Think. You've dined innocently for the man I know you to be. I suppose you never heard of rustlin'?"
"That's archaic," said Keene sharply.
"Men don't rustle these days."

"Think so? Wait a bit! Old Carr is always short of cash. He has to hire his men just for the few needs 'em. He's got only about four or five men permanently on his payroll. That means that poverty keeps him from building up a bureau of waddies he could count on to charge hell with a cup of water if the Hour-glass needed it. He's honest, too, and that's a handicap when he lives next to the Broken Spur. For years Dustin and Goddard have been tryin' by a law suit, to get the extra supply that makes the Hour-glass valuable. Can't you see what happens? Old man Carr, crippled, is bein' robbed dead, dumb and blind to make him sell his place. . ."

"But he can only sell his share. Half of the place is mine. . ."

"Well then. . . Stone hauled himself erect in his chair. . . "It looks to me as if one Gerald Keene, before long, will find himself next to two crooks. If old man Carr is right. Don't you see? Old man Carr will have to sell his half of the Hour-glass to these men Dustin and Goddard to stand square with the world. . ."

"Does your friend Lyon say these men Dustin and Goddard are two crooks?"
"He didn't have to say so. He said he couldn't understand 'em. Old Ben is so straight that the only man he doesn't understand is a crook. Why?"
"Well. . . I told old man Burwell I was goin' to run down to the Hourglass and have a look at the place. If I go as the half-owner I'll learn exactly 'nough' if there's any crooked workin' goin' on. I'm thinkin' it'll be best for me to go down there with a letter of introduction from Gerald Keene, the half-owner of the Hour-glass, to old man Carr. To get me a job down there and to see for myself what's goin' on."

"Huh. Gerald Keene'll learn nothin' but bad on Gerald Keene's ranch," said Stone grimly.
"That's so. I can't go to the Broken Spur because if Dustin and Goddard are really crooked, they won't be hirin' any strangers on the ranch. If things are as crooked as men say the Hour-glass'll be the place to learn about it. My plan's the best. I'll go down there with a letter from Gerald Keene and say they're till you hear from me. I'll get me a job."

"Huh! What kind of a job? A qualified cowpuncher'll be under saddle the minute he hits the Hour-glass. Why would a qualified workman take on with a busted ranch when there are others better able to pay him what he's worth? You can't get a job, he's worth."

Keene slapped him on the shoulder.
"Don't you see, I can't. But I'll go as a tenderfoot. I'll take a letter of introduction to old man Carr. I'll be Duro Stone lookin' for a job to learn the ways of the Hour-glass. Every druggist in the East is turnin' out amateur cow-punchers. He'll be one."

Stone laughed in spite of himself.
"I know the type. Druggists cover punches! Nickel plated gunsmen! Bearskin chaps! Bought straight from Montana-Wash. Shucks, man! You can't do it. You can't fool anybody who's ever forked a cayuse. Your walk; your color; the way you ride. . . Nothin' doin'."

"I'll show you. Let me at that telephone till I order some stuff." In five minutes he had sent an order crackling across the wire.
"To be delivered in twenty minutes sharp," he pouted.

In a half-hour it was there and a grinning boy handed the receipt. Keene thrust the boy into the hall, untied the package and turned to Stone.
"You damned old Doubting Thomas," he said. "I'll show you! Wait."

He was gone like a whirlwind. A half-hour later the inner door opened and a new figure stood in the doorway. Newsman overrode all his gear. His stretched boots winked about the ankles and his red-and-green shirt fairly crackled in its creases. His white goatskin chaps had evidently been combed and newly brushed and a nickel-plated gun showed three freshly filed cuts across its butt whereat both men laughed mightily. Stone roared with laughter and Keene raised himself on his toes and studied his reflection in the long glass.

"I'm Duro Stone," he said. "I'm goin' down to the Hour-glass to get the 300 tuckin' cows and calves into their little beds. I'm goin' to learn all there is to be learned about cows at their ways. I'm not Gerald Keene. I'm Duro Stone who used to sell papers on the Rock Island route. I always did want to be a cow-puncher. Will I do?"

"God knows what you'll do," quoth Stone between grins. "But if you and out what the trouble is at the Hour-glass or the Broken Spur, you win for one Gerald Keene. That's me! I'll help you chase the horn of the nest."

"Wait. . . Keene came back from the closet with a bottle and glasses. "Here's the health of Keene and Stone. . . I'll wish if I need you."

"And when I hear," said Duro Stone, left behind, "I'll sure come a-rudder."

"You may need me," said Keene soberly. "I hope not but I'm afraid." "All right, Old Timer. To the health of the new Duro Stone."

CHAPTER II.

"There he comes now! That's old Dad Kane as sure as shootin'!" Sam Dustin, half-owner of the Broken Spur ranch, jerked a finger to the west and Spike Goddard, his partner, rose slowly and squinted into the dust-buzz of the range.

"You're a damned fool ever to have grubstaked that old fool Dad Kane," he said explosively. "It's all your doin'. Too. Three hundred dollars plumb throwed away."

His words carried a sting. They were meant to do just that. Everything that Spike Goddard said or did carried a sting. His red face, his cold blue eyes, his wire-stiff reddish beard all bespoke combativeness and Dustin felt that sting. He knew that alliance under the whip-lash of his tongue would annoy Spike more than any speech.

Dustin and Goddard had owned the Broken Spur for several years and all Crevasse County wondered how they made it pay. That they did make money was clear but they knew how they did it. Old Sam Peters, the decrepit old cashier at the only bank in Seco, could have told them but there were good reasons why Peters should tell nothing that affected Sam Dustin.

"If you'd told me three years ago that you were aimin' to grubstake old Shammie skin Kane," said Goddard, "I had told you it was the old."

"I know," then you stopped me from takin' up the Bar Circle range lease for grass," snapped Dustin. "That cost us over ten thousand."

All because you were scared to take a chance." This time Spike flushed. A man does not care to be reminded of his timorous moments that cost him money. He stood by his partner, scowling off into the sunset. Joint owners of the Broken Spur, they were as different as black is from red. Sam Dustin's tall thin figure, his dark, handsome face, his flawless teeth made a perfect foil for his partner who was, as Jameson, Editor of the Seco Courier said, "As red as a fox and twice as shy. I wouldn't trust the pair a—"

"here I'd trust a coyote in a hen." More ice is consumed throughout the world to-day than any other food product. Of the 150,000 active physicians in the United States, about 100,000 are connected with hospitals.

Laws Of Physics

Intricate Point Is Settled At The University of Saskatchewan

Laws of physics as operating in the court of Magistrate J. S. McKenock at Sudbury, Ontario, have no validity in Saskatchewan. In the physics laboratory at the University of Saskatchewan are two suspended leaden balls of equal weight. When one but swinging slowly is struck by one swinging rapidly in the other direction, it is the slowly-moving ball that bounces back while the one previously in rapid motion becomes almost motionless. An authority on physics points out that if two bodies of differing momenta (weight multiplied by velocity) meet, the resultant momentum will be the same in direction as that of the major force. The majority carries. An electric current always is passing from the atmosphere into the earth.

Little Helps For This Week

"Let I pray Thee Thy loving kindness be for my comfort, according to Thy word unto Thy servant." Psalm 119:76.

Love divine has seen and counted Every tear it caused to fall; And the storm which Love appointed Was its choicest gift of all.

O that thou couldst dwell in the knowledge and sense of this, even that the Lord beholds thy sufferings with an eye of pity, and is able not only to sympathize under them, but also to do thee good by them. Therefore grieve not at thy lot, be not discontented, look not at the hardness of thy condition, but when the storms of vexation are sharp look up to Him who can give meekness and patience, can lift up thy head over all, and can cause thy life to grow and be a gainster by all. If the Lord God help thee according to thy condition of affliction and distress thou wilt have to cause to complain, but will bless His name.—I. Pennington.

Then and Now

Fifteen years ago Canada was engaged in floating one of the most successful of its war loans. National enthusiasm was at its highest pitch. Business was booming and money was plentiful. Results exceeded the fondest hopes, nearly 800,000 citizens subscribing for the 1919 Victory Loan Bonds. True, the income yield of 5 1/2% was very attractive, but opinion then was, that people subscribed more from their wholehearted desire to assist national reconstruction rather than because of the attractive rate of interest.

Holders of these 1919 Victory Bonds, which will mature on Nov. 1st, are now being asked to convert them into bonds of the 1934 Refunding Loan. That the majority of holders of 1919 Victory Bonds will avail themselves of this privilege there can be no doubt. They know what a safe and profitable investment they have had and will surely wish to continue it. The record of Dominion of Canada Bonds during the past few years when investors have suffered loss of capital and distress of mind, demonstrates conclusively that there is no safer investment than Dominion of Canada Bonds. Security of principal is paramount in any investment. Consequently when the unassailable security of Dominion of Canada Bonds is coupled with so desirable an income yield as is offered by the new Bonds, the response from those having bonds to convert as well as applications from new investors should be both prompt and enthusiastic.

Likes Alberta Best

Fraser Hunt, associate editor for years of Cosmopolitan Magazine, who owns a ranch in Alberta, near the EP Ranch, has just arrived for the fall season at his Alberta headquarters. In an interview, he said, "I am an Albertan and prefer here to anywhere else in Canada or America. My entire investment is tied up at High River."

Regulations Regarding Migratory Birds

live, or machine guns, or battery, or any gun larger than number 10 gauge is prohibited and the use of any aeroplane, power-boat, sail boat, live birds as decoys, night light, and shooting from any horse-drawn or motor vehicle is forbidden.

The shooting of migratory game birds earlier than one hour before sunrise or later than one hour after sunset is prohibited.

The penalty for violation of the migratory bird laws is a fine of not more than three hundred dollars and not less than ten dollars, or imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, or both fine and imprisonment.

Regulations Encouraging Touring

Canadian government regulations are framed to provide for the admittance of tourists at bonhomie or ocean ports with the minimum of inconvenience. Only the duty of guarding against the admittance, in the guise of tourist, of persons who are inadmissible under the regulations, necessitates the simple immigration formalities which are required. As more than 12 million tourists entered Canada last year it is apparent that the boundary line is no barrier to legitimate traffic.

A sixty-day automobile touring permit may be obtained, without bond, by a non-resident visiting Canada for purposes of health or pleasure but not for any commercial or business pursuits. This permit may be extended for another thirty days on making application to any collector or sub-collector of customs, and satisfying him as to the bona fides of the applicant as a tourist. If the visitor desires to extend the period to six months he may do so by giving bond.

Generous provision is now made for the entry of travellers' baggage, camping outfits, etc. The outfit usually brought in by a tourist, all of which was subject to entry on deposit, has also been taken into consideration, and the regulations now provide that fishing rods, guns, golf clubs, cameras, and many other like articles, the property of the tourist and brought in for his personal use and not for gain or hire, may be included among these articles of tourists' outfits which may be admitted without deposit.

Whether the tourist enters Canada by land, water or air, equal facilities lenient and unrestrictive have been provided. The aeroplane is becoming increasingly popular as a means of travel to summer resorts hunting and fishing hunts.
